

“Pests and Diseases of Amenity trees”

A Workshop to raise awareness of pests and diseases which can affect amenity trees

Milton Keynes Parks Trust, The Cricket Pavilion
8 June 2005

Pests and diseases on trees

However well we look after our trees, many will, at some point, suffer from problems related to pests, diseases or other environmental stresses. Experts from Forest Research, Nigel Straw and David Rose, will talk about some of the latest problems facing British trees. Examples include the increasing profile of Phytophthora pathogens, which can cause problems as diverse as bleeding canker on horse chestnut and dieback of alder, and the recent entry of the horse chestnut leaf miner (Cameraria ohridella) into the UK. They will show delegates how to recognise a range of specific problems and will review management options.

Who should attend?

This workshop is aimed at all those concerned with the planting and caring for trees in an urban environment. It is particularly relevant for tree officers, arboricultural practitioners, surveyors/consulting arborists and all those with the responsibility for choosing trees and ensuring that they thrive.

Venue and Arrangements

Milton Keynes is easily accessible by car via the M1 and by train (and further directions will be supplied to delegates.) The morning session will start with coffee at 9:30, and break mid-morning for refreshments. Lunch at 12:30 will be a cold buffet, followed by an afternoon session looking at pests and diseases in the local park (Bring outdoor clothes as weather conditions can be unpredictable!). The workshop will conclude with a plenary session at around 16:00.
